Chamber Gala

A Fun Night Honoring Special People

In the Chamber of Commerce world, recognition plays a huge part in how the business community moves forward. It's also how it builds incentives for outstanding performance. For many years, the Blair County Chamber of Commerce has made a high priority of honoring businesses and individuals in a variety of important categories. That practice will continue in 2024 as the Chamber has scheduled a major event on June 20th at the Blair County Convention Center. The Awards Gala is an upscale combination of the recognition portion of the Chamber's Annual Meeting and the Business Hall of Fame luncheon. Putting those events together and adding a social component will make for an enjoyable evening, predicts Altoona-Blair County Development Corporation CEO Steve McKnight. "We've looked at a number of ways to pay tribute to exceptional performance by businesses while also acknowledging how important it is that we take some time to relax and have some fun," he pointed out. "We feel that this Gala will accomplish both." The event begins with a red carpet champagne reception followed by banquet stations, an award ceremony and concluding with live music and dancing, featuring The Pines. The award ceremony pays tribute to three businesses and six individuals. All expressed gratitude for being selected. "We were absolutely thrilled and deeply honored to receive the news," admitted Michael DelGrosso,

Chief Sales & Marketing Officer at DelGrosso Foods. DelGrosso's will receive the Business of the Year Award. "It's a testament to the dedication of so many people over the past 77 years, especially our current team, who rose to the occasion to ensure that our recent expansion was a success." The Small Business of the Year Award goes to Bedford Candies. "This means so much to us because, as a small business in today's economy, it's tough to stand out, create brand recognition and stay relevant to customers," according to Danae Weyant, who is the company's Marketing Coordinator. "For us, this award serves as a reminder of why we do what we do." Roaring Spring Community Library is the third business recipient. The library will receive the Non-Profit Spotlight which recognizes a not-for-profit organization that has demonstrated resilience, creation and delivery of impactful programs. "This type of recognition is all about the hard work and dedication of our staff, volunteers and community supporters," disclosed Michelle McIntyre, the library's director. "It's incredibly gratifying to see our efforts acknowledged in such a meaningful way." From the individual award side, the sentiments were much the same. "I am so humbled and grateful for this type of recognition," said Deborah Prosser, who will receive the coveted ATHENA Award. "Looking at the past recipients, I really don't feel worthy." Carter Cerully will receive the Donna D. Gority Servant Leadership Award. "When I first got involve in the community, Donna Gority was one of the first people I'd recognize at events," he noted. "This award is very special because it speaks to the qualities that I aspire to." David Kimmel will be the honoree for the George Award, which honors volunteerism in the community. "I'm aware that this is one of the Chamber's special and unique awards." Kimmel pointed out. "I was completely surprised and very humbled." So, too, was Joe Logan, a longtime teacher and coach at Central High School who will receive the Judith A. Rossi Educator of the Year. "I could never have envisioned receiving an honor like this one," he stated. "It validates that I'm doing something right" Kara Bennett and Cory Gehret, active in so many Chamber activities, will receive the Chamber Spirit Award and the Chamber Extra Mile Award respectively. "I'm very passionate about what the Chamber represents," Bennett emphasized. "I'm proud to be a member!" Make your reservations by visiting the Chamber website at www.blairchamber.com. In the meantime, you can purchase sponsorships for the Gala as well as ads of congratulations to recognize the award winners. Call Jessie Covert at (814) 943-8151.
